1 Sundial House

The Sundial House will offer a panorama of everything from downtown Denver, to Longs Peak, Pikes Peak, and the 8,200 acres of Backcountry Wilderness Area. This luxurious retreat will be a private lodge, exclusively for BackCountry residents and their guests to enjoy. Residents will come here to relax, use the pool, lounge on the patios, and exercise in the fitness and movement studio. And, of course, whenever your wild heart desires, the Sundial House will guide you out into the Backcountry Wilderness Area, and lead you back home at day's end. The first phase of the Sundial House, which includes the pool and spa area is scheduled to open summer of 2009.

2 The South Rim

467 acres of the 8,200-acre Backcountry Wilderness Area have been reserved as private open space and are yours alone to enjoy as residents of BackCountry.

3 Water's Edge

Slated for future development, Water's Edge Park will be located directly downhill from the Sundial House with steep slopes that lead to the water's edge. Nestled along the main road to the Sundial House and close to a number of custom homes, when completed this park will be a wonderful spot to enjoy a morning cup of coffee.

4 Solstice Park

When completed, Solstice Park will feature the largest manicured lawn in the neighborhood anchored by a line of trees that will flow south, leading up the hill to the Sundial House. This beautiful park is sure to be a favorite open space for a game of Frisbee or a picnic.

5 Reflection Park

Ready and waiting for your enjoyment, Reflection Park is distinguished by an open green area surrounding the lake, with a deck/patio that stretches out over the water's edge. Step out over the water and take in the view, or take to the paved trail that leads from the park to the Sundial House.

6 Overlook Park

Already a neighborhood favorite, Overlook Park has earned its name due to its elevated location above the surrounding terrain. There's an observation area where you can look down over the Discovery Center, or take in the astonishing views of the surrounding neighborhood.

7 Windmill Park

As the community continues to grow, so will the parks. Windmill Park will be located just over a gentle hill and will have its own manicured lawn. Although Windmill Park will be somewhat removed from the other parks, it is sure to be a favorite gathering spot for neighbors who live close by and will have direct access by trails.

8 Discovery Park

The first park you'll experience as you enter BackCountry, Discovery Park features a meandering waterway that makes its way into a pond along the Discovery Center's edge. You'll find some small, private spaces, perfect for reflection by the water, or time with a good book.
